SHIPS BRING FLOOD SURVIVORS TO CITY FROM REFUGE SPOTS

Huge Relief Machine Cares For Refugees Of Stricken Area

VICKSBURG, Miss., May 5.—From north, south, east and west the broken haggard lives of homeless and hopeless continued today to converge upon historic Vicksburg.

More than sixteen thousand were in five camps about the city before noon and still the motley fleet which is Louisiana's salvation rushed back and forth across the Mississippi's inland sea to bring in yet more from the levees, the houseboats and the trees.

For ten days, Vicksburg has been receiving flood victims with open arms. Stunned by the enormity of the task which has been thrust upon her, she is yet calm and resolute in her purpose to care for all who come to her for food and shelter.

The refugee registration at Red Cross headquarters is only a little short of the normal population of the city. Regular business for the most part goes by the boards while shopkeepers, professional and business men, tradesmen and servants devote themselves to their places in the great relief machine which has sprung up in the city. Housewives are busy with their tasks of providing clothing for the utterly destitute in the camps. Business men and tradesmen have taken over the matter of supplies and shipments, professional men are looking after sanitation and sickness in the camps. Scores of servants are assigned to tasks about the bustling Red Cross headquarters, in the camps, in National Guard headquarters and in the hospitals to which the injured and sick are taken from the rescue boats.

The entire city is organized on a military basis. No one knows as yet how great the task is to be, or how long it will last. A few days ago when 6,000 refugees were in camp here, the city thought it had about all it could handle. When, following the Milliken Bend break Tuesday, the figure jumped to 10,000 everyone thought the absolute limit had been reached. But still the boats returned with more.

As fast as it could be unloaded each craft headed across the river to nose through the trees and behind levees in search of more. Yesterday morning more than 15,000 had been brought in for feeding and shelter, and today the figure had jumped to 16,234 registered which officials estimate means 20,000 homeless within the city limits.

BARE KNEES WILL NOT BAR PUPIL

CLEVELAND, O., May 5.—Gertie Bate, 8, will attend school wearing abbreviated stockings, as usual.

When the little girl was sent home by her teacher with orders "to cover her knees," the matter was taken up with the superintendent and the director of health work in the schools. Each declared no such order had been handed down from his office. The director of health work, Dr. L. W. Childs, said he was in favor of "bare knees."

"The more body surface exposed to the wind and sun, the better," said Dr. Childs. "Children should get all the sunlight possible through the skin. It helps to build bone."

RUSSIA THREATENS TO LEAVE MEETING

GENEVA, May 5.—The Russian delegation to the League of Nations economic conference today threatened withdrawal.

Resenting the Swiss precautions to protect them the Russian delegates declared they are virtual prisoners and served notice on Secretary Sir Eric Drummond that they will withdraw from the conference unless the police measures are modified.

The Russians have been compelled to ride in special automobiles with police escort and the corridors of their hotel have been under heavy guard.

Sir Eric Drummond promised to ask the Swiss authorities to make the protection less stringent and the Russians thereupon agreed to attend the morning session of the conference.

FRENCH FLYER DEFIES ORDER TO FLY ACROSS ATLANTIC

RIO JANEIRO, May 5.—A daring flight across the south Atlantic is in progress today, according to reports received here.

Defying orders of the French government that he make no attempt to fly across the Atlantic without floats on his plane, Captain St. Roman, French aviator, is reported to have jumped off from St. Louis, Senegal, early today for Pernambuco.

The dispatches state that the flight is "unofficial" and Captain St. Roman is making it on his own responsibility.

Early in his flight, Captain St. Roman found that the floats attached to his plane were so heavy that they decreased his ability to climb. He detached the floats, a member of the party refused to continue. Then the French government ordered him to restore the floats or abandon the flight. Now reports state that he defied his government and is making a hazardous attempt.

If Captain St. Roman should be forced down on the water it is doubtful whether he could keep afloat for more than an hour or so, and possibly not that long, without floats.

GRAY TESTIFIES HE REFUSED TO STRIKE CRIME ACCOMPLICE

Ruth Planned Scheme To Avert Suspicion Says Salesman

COURTHOUSE, Long Island City, N. Y., May 5.—Henry Judd Gray, self-confessed murderer, resumed the witness stand today to finish his melodramatic story of the vicious slaying of Albert Snyder. He sat calmly in the witness box, peering through horn-rimmed glasses, seemingly none the worse from his ordeal of yesterday when he described in dreadful detail the bloody killing of the art editor.

The blonde Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder, his co-defendant, whom he has pictured as a deliberate murderess who forced him finally to slay her sleeping husband, sat pale and shaken at her counsel's table, watching her former lover's face apprehensively. Anguish was written all over her blanched countenance. All her old spirit and defiance were gone.

Gray, under questions of his attorney, Samuel L. Miller, proceeded with his blood-chilling story in a clear, precise voice.

The courtroom was again packed to the very doors, most of the spectators were women.

Miller continued the questioning. Q. Mr. Gray, last evening you told us about the burning of certain articles in the cellar of the Snyder home after the killing of Albert Snyder on the morning of March 20. Please proceed with what happened. A. I was in the room of Mrs. Brown (Mrs. Snyder's mother). Mrs. Snyder disappeared. She returned shortly and I asked her where she had been. She said she had burned my shirt, her nightgown and bathrobe in the furnace. I put on shirt (Snyder's blue shirt which Mrs. Snyder had given him to replace his bloody one) and we went downstairs.

Q. What did you do next? A. I swept around the coal bin so that my shoeprints would not show. Q. What else? A. I also

DEFICIT WILL FACE STATE TRACY TELLS GOVERNOR DONAHAY

Urges Governor And Legislature To Take Action

COLUMBUS, O., May 5.—Unless Governor Vic Donahay and members of the Ohio legislature take action along lines of curtailing expenditures and providing for additional revenue, a deficit of approximately $20,000,000 will exist in the state's general revenue fund by the close of the 18-months' fiscal period ending Dec. 31, 1928, State Auditor Joseph T. Tracy estimated today.

At the request of the governor, Tracy submitted to Donahay late Wednesday figures and estimates relative to the financial condition of the Ohio treasury.

Tracy told the governor that the deficit in the state treasury on June 30, next, is estimated to approximate $12,803,000.

Based upon existing appropriations, present taxation measures and those passed at the present legislative session, Tracy informed Donahay of his estimate that the deficit in the state's general revenue fund would be increased about $7,150,000 during the 18-months' period beginning July 1, next. This would raise the deficit to about $20,000,000 by Dec. 31, 1928.

It was no wonder, as this blood-curdling tale came grating through the radio amplifiers, that Warren Schneider, the slain man's brother, fainted; that four of his sisters had to be assisted from the room; that Gray's mother wept; that Mrs. Snyder's mother wept and that even the "bloody blonde" herself broke down and wept. Even the most hardened reporters felt a shiver shoot up their spines as Gray's voice attained the proportions of a scream as he described the climax of the terrible tragedy.

The gibbering little corset sales man resumes the stand today but anything further he will say will be an anti-climax for those who heard that story yesterday.

ANSWER TO BRITISH GIVES CURT REBUKE FOR REVIVING ISSUE

Blunt Rejoinder To England Says Question Is "Closed"

WASHINGTON, May 5.—The United States informed the world today that the matter of international war debts is a closed book so far as Washington is concerned.

This is the practical effect of Secretary of State Kellogg's curt note to the British government, answering a formal communication from London which sought to make a controversy out of an exchange of letters between Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, and John Grier Hibben, president of Princeton.

"The government of the United States regards the correspondence between Mr. Mellon and Mr. Hibben as a purely domestic discussion, and does not desire to engage in any formal diplomatic exchange on the subject," said Kellogg's note.

For brevity and bluntness, this government's icy rejoinder to the British communication is almost unprecedented in diplomatic exchanges between London and Washington. It is, in effect a thinly disguised rebuke to the British foreign office for taking up something that was not addressed to the British in the first place.

It constitutes as well, the second diplomatic slap that Washington has handed London this week, the other occasion being President Coolidge's advice to the American people to disregard much of the British-colored news that is now emanating from London and the Far East concerning America's Chinese policy.

While the Kellogg note made it clear this government has no intention of arguing with the British foreign office over the merits of the British-American debt settlement, the contentions advanced by the British were promptly answered by Secretary Mellon in a public statement. He stood pat on his letter to Mr. Hibben, and using the same figures cited by Winston Churchill, the chancellor of the exchequer, showed that by next year Britain will be receiving from her debtors more than enough money to make the annual payments on Britain's debt to the United States.

While regretting the re-appearance of the debt controversy, administration officials on the whole are just as well satisfied to have it come up and disposed of at this time. It has expected for some time that some of the foreign debtors would take advantage of the present economic conference at Geneva to attempt to re-open the agitation for debt cancellation.

The British government's action in raising the question before the economic conference had a chance to do so has thus afforded the American government the opportunity it desired to slam the door once and for all on this controversy. It would take no credit to the United States to engage in an argument or recrimination over a dead issue.

LONDON, May 5.—Great Britain is prepared to let the debt problem discussion die down again, it was stated officially today.

The British government is willing to accept the statement of Secretary of State Kellogg that the questions raised by the statements of the Columbia and Princeton professors are domestic issues, and Great Britain will not attempt to force an exchange of diplomatic notes on the debts question.

GOVERNOR VETOES DOG WARDEN BILL

COLUMBUS, O., May 5.—Governor Vic Donahay's veto of the Hodson-Loughhead bill, authorizing appointment of county dog wardens and deputies to "seize and impound on sight all dogs" is on record today. The governor decided there is "no need" for such officials.

The approving signature of the governor was attached to the Laybourne bill, legalizing sale of church property without a court order, and the Herbert bill, authorizing police departments to sell unclaimed automobiles after ninety days.

PROPOSE PLAN FOR FINANCING COUNTY MILK COMMISSION

Tentative plans for an appropriation, to come out of the treasury of Greene County Medical Society, to carry on the proposed work of the newly organized County Milk Commission, were laid by medical men at the monthly meeting of the Medical Society, in the offices of the county health commissioner, Thursday.

An exhaustive report of the Milk Commission was given by Dr. R. R. McClellan. The Milk Commission has begun to function with a complete organization, with a veterinarian working in cooperation with the commission.

Dr. McClellan also gave a report of the "library committee" of the Medical Society, of which he is the chairman and which is establishing a medical library department in the Greene County District Library.

The paper of the day was submitted by Dr. C. E. Kennedy, of the staff of Antioch College, Yellow Springs, on "The Physical Education in Preventive Medicine." He

The society had luncheon together after the meeting.

FIRE CHIEF WANTS ACCURATE ALARMS

Repeating a recent request, Fire Chief William Hanftan urges citizens, in phoning in a fire alarm, to be specific in furnishing information and supply firemen with explicit directions as to the location of the blaze in order to guard against delay.

Do not become excited but give more attention to details, the fire chief asks. The department should be furnished with the number of the house or building on fire, information as to the nearest street intersection and some person should station himself at a point of vantage and flag the fire truck as it comes by.

This co-operation on the part of Xenians is imperative, Chief Hanftan declares.

BIBLE THOUGHT

OUR HOPE.—And now, Lord, what wait I for? my hope is in thee. Deliver me from all my transgressions: make me not the reproach of the foolish. Psalm 89:7, 8.

AMERICAN POLICY IN CHINA

The United States government, while co-operating militarily with the other powers in their protective work in China, is apparently pursuing a course of its own diplomatically. This is a policy in which most Americans take genuine satisfaction.

Whatever reasons there may be for co-operating with other powers in international matters elsewhere, and there are many, the argument for unity has little application to China. European interests there are not ours. America has no concessions there, no seaports, no special holdings or rights or privileges of any kind. It has only the history and tradition of square dealing with China, and insistence that in trade matters all nations shall be treated alike.

America has been a consistent friend of China for half a century, while other powers have been grabbing territory and acquiring dubious privileges of many kinds which they now feel called on to defend. It is no part of American duty to help the other powers hold those privileges. America is not obligated to pull any of their chestnuts out of the fire, or join them in coercing China to provide more chestnuts.

America asks only for fair treatment of Americans, and protection for American life and property, and will stand a better chance of getting these benefits by playing a lone hand than by helping the game of the imperialistic powers.

Great Britain, France and Italy seem to feel very bad about it. They might feel better if they would follow the American example. And they may do that very thing, if America stands pat on her own policy of justice to China and non-interference in Chinese affairs.

WORLD AIR RULES

The International Aviation Congress in London has been making air traffic rules, which are needed and will soon be needed worse.

There is to be no more "fay-flying." An aviator following a railroad or canal must not wobble or cross at a slant, but when he finds it necessary to cross over, must do so at a right angle, as pedestrians are supposed to do on the street.

Americans, readily agreeing to that, will not like so well the left-hand rule adopted. Following any recognized airway, aviators are supposed to keep to the left instead of the right. This rule was obtained by England and other left-handed nations, and may make trouble for American and Canadian fliers—though a right-hand rule would probably make equal trouble for the other fellows.

Less comprehensible is the effort of the British and French delegates to drop the name "aeroplane," which in America is generally simplified in "airplane," and use instead "aerodrome." They will have more trouble putting that over.

TEACHING WITH MOVIES

Public schools in twelve American cities next fall will experiment with moving pictures as educational aids. Some forty moving pictures for use in the fourth, fifth and sixth grades in the study of geography, elementary science and hygiene will be shown. School authorities will check the results very carefully, to see just how effective these films are in comparison with the old methods of study.

To one who is not a teacher it seems as if the movie ought to be a magnificent way of getting little Johnnie to learn things that leave him absolutely cold when he studies about them in books. Many will await the result of this experiment with considerable interest.

NO MORE GUNS BY MAIL

May 10 is a notable day for one reason. On that day the law prohibiting the promiscuous use of the mails for the shipping of firearms will become effective. Congress enacted the law and Postmaster General New has sent a list of the regulations to all postmasters and responsible postal officials. From May 10 forward it should be difficult for gun-buyers to get their weapons from mail order houses and to make the United States government a party to their purchases by carrying the guns in the mail.

A fine of $1,000 and a two-year term in a federal penitentiary are the penalties for so using the mails.

Gunmen will still get hold of guns, but not quite so easily as before. Barring firearms from the mails is only one small move in their regulation, but it is one decided in the right direction.

If you disapprove of floods, this is a good time to plant a few trees.

IDEA DETONATORS NEEDED a fortune if I could only think of And so have you. But what is it?

Little Old New York

NEW YORK, May 5.—New York is the mecca for the foreign actor, writer, singer, dancer, dressmaker, lecturer and down-at-the-heel. The Big Town stretches forth its hands laden with vast wealth, inviting the Busted Brethren from abroad to journey across the pond to see, sing, yawp and ply in exchange for many gold-back treasure notes.

To the credit of the business ability of the Busted Brigade from Overseas, be it said they responded right merrily. Yea, they come like grasshoppers, for multitude; and when they've corraled all the dough they can carry, they lie them back to the Homeland, where they resided in ease and comfort for the remainder of their days, interrupting their placid existence, now and then, to indie snappy pieces to the letter columns of the Foreign Press, conferring the Order of the Raspberry, with Three Palmas, on those "dear, delightful New Yorkers."

Will Durant, who can do more tricks with Philosophy than Fred C. Kelly can do with a pack of cards, was one of the Big League Stylus Pushers hired by New York City to "interpret" the Snyder-Gray murder trial. Analyzing Ruth Snyder's leading man, William Durant, said in this caseless case:

"No doubt Judd Gray needed a romance. Selling corsets is a thankless task in this caseless case."

To which is appended the following note:

One of the largest of the second-string of New York department stores advertised a "Corset Sale" in the Sunday newspapers. Seventy-five thousand of them went on sale the morning following, and at closing time Tuesday

There is a sidewalk stall in Forty-second street, just off Seventh avenue, where pineapple juice may be purchased at 10 cents a glass.

A few paces distant a beggar on crutches nightly installs himself, selling ancient ballads. "Pineapple juice, 10 cents a glass," warbles the lad in the booth.

"De Face on De Barroom Floor, it cents a copy!" sings the lad on crutches.

That's what the Eighteenth amendment has done for Forty-second street.

"Part of the price of prominence," says Montaigne, "is the absence of privacy."

To which Mazda Lane has appended the injunction: "So live that you never disappoint your press agent!"

Keeping HEALTHY by Dr. A. F. Currier

ILLUSIONS

Mrs. E. W.: "Will you write an article on illusions? I have not observed any mention of this subject in your health column. Do they lead to insanity or to any breakdown of the mind? There are doubtless others who would be interested in this subject as well as I."

An illusion has been defined by an eminent writer on diseases of the mind and nervous system, as an erroneous perception of external objects and relations, and this writer cites as a very good example a mirage in the desert, where a lake with its appropriate surroundings appears to be seen.

We are sure that no lake is there, but there is a difference in the density between the strata of air near the ground and those which are higher up, and the sky and clouds are reflected into these denser strata, producing the optical effect of a sheet of water.

The appearance is there of a picture which consciousness and past experience would term a lake, but the appearance is illusory, the thing is not what it seems no matter whether we understand the real meaning or not.

If we know the scientific explanation, we simply look at it and perhaps admire it. If we are consumed with thirst and do not know its meaning, we rush forward to quench our thirst, only to find that we have been deceived.

Illusions happen to most of us rather frequently. If our minds are strong and well-trained we are not much influenced by them; if our minds are weak the constant repetition of the illusory phenomena may sooner or later overcome us; we become unable to place the proper estimate upon events which happen to us, and the result may be the unbalancing of the mind with its power of judgment and discrimination.

Illusions may come to the insane—for comparatively few people are insane or unbalanced upon all subjects.

An insane person may even be able to detect an illusion. If he understands the science of optics, he may not be deceived by the mirage of the desert, but mental disease is very often steadily progressive and one who is thus afflicted may end by losing entire control of his reasoning powers on all subjects. An illusion is an optical deception. The sense of vision tells us, in the mirage, that we are looking at a lake; the judgment, the power of discrimination, the faculty of reasoning, corrects this error and tells us it is not a lake, but something else.

An illusion differs entirely from an hallucination, which is a mental conception of something which does not exist. One may exist absolutely that a thing exists which exists only in his individual imagination.

The ex-Kaiser of Germany may believe absolutely that he is the embodiment of Frederick the Great. This is merely an hallucination, and entirely contrary to fact.

Unless I am very much mistaken his place in history will not be one which future generations of Germans will manifest any eagerness to discuss.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Miss S. M. T.: 1. Do you think fowls in this part of the United States (Providence, R. I.) are much troubled with tuberculosis, and would you advise me to continue eating raw eggs, as I have been doing with advantage? 2. Are soft-boiled eggs as high in food value as raw eggs? 3. What foods contain the most iron?

Answer—1. If you eat fresh eggs, eggs that have not been incubated, I do not think you need fear that they will cause tuberculosis, which is far less common in fowls than in cattle. 2. Yes, and many who seem to be unable to eat raw eggs have little or no trouble when they are boiled. Do not let this dissuade you. Green vegetables like spinach, peas, beans, celery, cabbage, etc., have iron and vitamins. There is also iron in eggs.

Ask Dr. Currier that medical question that has been puzzling you. Confine your letter to fifty words and send stamped, addressed envelope for reply. He cannot, of course, make individual diagnoses, and he reserves the right to decide as to the propriety of queries.

THE BIBLE

Editor, the Gazette:

After some observation and thought, I am not so sure "the book of books" should be read in public schools. THESE DAYS, for the very reason, we are striving for peace, and to contend for the Bible in our public schools causes agitation which leads to trouble. During my public school and college days the Bible was read each morning. When a teacher in Indiana, I too, read the Bible each morning. Eight years ago as teacher in the public schools of Warren County, Ohio, my mother read the Bible each morning, besides leading her pupils with sacred songs.

The Bible when read in the home is the best ballast. When I was seven years old, one of my grandmothers took me with her on horseback to Cincinnati. She brought for me a picture of the Bible which was a picture of the devil with big horns, which caused me to be afraid of the devil. I asked my grandmother to cut that out. She said she would not dare to do such a thing as on the other side was God's word. So I had to let the picture of the devil remain.

The oldest institution in the world is the home. There were no homes worthy of the name until the Bible built them. The importance of the home as an agency for religious training can hardly be overestimated. I make my strongest plea for the home altar, the glory of our common Anglo-Saxon history. During the World War I had charge of a Sunday School class of boys, seventeen to twenty years of age. Out of the class of twenty-two only one boy came from a home where the Bible was read. I fairly shuddered to learn this. My thought is expressed in the sixth chapter of Deuteronomy. The Bible may be taught through training. We use these kindred terms thoughtfully. We must clearly distinguish between teaching and training. We teach most by what we tell, by imparting information. We train by what we do through conduct, by what we are through action. You teach the child to pray, but you do not train him. You are teaching him in one direction, training him in another. You teach him to attend the Bible School, but you take no interest in it, and never go yourself. You are teaching him to attend the school; you are training him away from it. And training is bound to win over teaching.

You teach your child to read the Bible. It is well, but it is not a vital force in your life or a moulding power in your character. The Bible is a picture of the devil with big horns, which caused me to be afraid of the devil. I asked my grandmother to cut that out. She said she would not dare to do such a thing as on the other side was God's word. So I had to let the picture of the devil remain.

In all I have said, I have said but one thing, in different ways. It is in the home that counts most. This is in accordance with the divine intention. The home is God's first circle of society. Let the Bible dominate that circle of life, and it will become dominant in the larger circles of church and state. Most of the problems of the church, and Bible are solved in the home. Bible school. Nay, more, it is the best solution of the great problem of leading souls to Christ.

How to Achieve Beauty

PREVENTIVE AND PROTECTIVE MEASURES

Although I am going to talk today on preventive and protective measures necessary for skin beauty, I will not touch on extreme cases of skin disorders which should really be classed as skin diseases.

There are many minor afflictions which girls and women suffer from. In fact, statistics show that about seventy per cent of the girls and women bemoan impaired complexions.

In my opinion, the preventive measures are the prime factor in the clearing of the complexion. The first and foremost is the cleanliness which I stressed in yesterday's article on the adolescent skin. The thin, dry skin must be consistently fed with rich oils, that is, a nourishing cream of the richest consistency should be massaged into this type of skin regularly. If the skin is too oily, it should be bathed with diluted alcohol or a tonic or astringent lotion, or dashed with cold water to keep it firm.

Women who live in climates where the atmosphere is continually moist, usually have a better complexion than women who live in extreme dry climates or high altitudes. Few people can begin to estimate how much complexions

WIFE PRESERVERS

Under Arrest

Dr. W. J. Sullivan is held by Los Angeles police with Dorothy Mackaye, actress. They're charged with concealing facts in the death of Ray Raymond, Miss Mackaye's husband. Paul Kelly, film actor and friend of the woman, is charged with the killing.

The Theatre

What's a mere million dollars? This year's picture productions would indicate that it is not such an enormous sum as you might imagine. Nearly every big company is releasing at least one feature which has cost somewhere in seven figures.

"The King of Kings" cost approximately $2,000,000. "Wings," and the "Rough Riders," together rated at $3,000,000. "Uncle Tom's Cabin," $1,500,000, and "Sunrise" at $1,000,000. And now First National is planning to spend a like amount on both "The Miracle" and "The Patent Leather Kid," the latter a war film of the tank genre, featuring Richard Barthelmess.

"The Wedding March," has already cost $1,250,000 and Erich Von Stroheim is said to be considering adding a few more sequences. At last reports, the picture had thirty reels.

Cornell Woolrich, twenty-one years old and a resident of New York City, has been awarded the first prize of $10,000 for the best story submitted in the competition recently conducted by College Humor and First National Pictures. Both the established and unknown writer entered work on an equal footing, although the story especially was urged to enter. The contest closed February 15, 1927, and thousands of manuscripts were considered.

Either a short story, novelette or novel was eligible to win the prize. "Children of the Ritz," by Cornell Woolrich, is a full length novel. It will appear in College Humor beginning with the August issue. Following that, Boni & Livry will issue it in book form, and First National Pictures will make a feature photoplay of it. Much critical attention will be turned upon it, and it is almost certain to establish the writing reputation of young Woolrich.

Two elaborate features which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is producing "Old Heidelberg" and "The Trial of '98" the latter a story of the Alaskan gold rush, both with large investments. It is a year of big money in film production and there is little hokum about the estimates.

Charles Gilpin, for several years the composer of Mask and Wig shows for the University of Pennsylvania, has become a professional producer. His first production is "Listen Dearie," a musical comedy now meeting with popular success at the Chestnut St. Opera House, Philadelphia, where it is playing an indefinite engagement.

CENTRAL HIGH INVITED TO PLAY TOLEDO GRID TEAM NEXT FALL

Central High School's 1927 football team has been invited to appear in Toledo, O., next season for a game with the Cathedral Latin High School eleven of that city. It is learned. The invitation was in the nature of an inquiry.

The game would complete Central's 1927 grid schedule besides furnishing the team with its best road game of the season.

School officials have not indicated, however, whether the invitation will be rejected or accepted.

FACULTY DEFEATED BY SOPHOMORES IN SOFT BALL CONTEST

Sophomores surprised by defeating the faculty of Central High School in an intra-mural league soft ball game by a score of 19 to 11 in what is known as one of those hectic games Wednesday at Cox Memorial Athletic Field.

The yearlings started off in fine fashion scoring six runs in the opening inning. Faculty retaliated with three in the second and five in the third to go into the lead 8 to 7. After this hitting display, the attack of the teachers faded away while the students were tallying four times in the fourth, six in the fifth and two more in the sixth.

Kolb led the faculty at bat with three hits, besides scoring three runs himself. Buell crossed the plate five times for the victors. Errors were plentiful.

Faculty lineup: Bond, c; Bantyne, p; Hays, 2b; Kolb, ss; Patterson, cf; Pondry, 1b; Hampson, 3b; Ketter, rf; Doak, lf; Sophomore lineup: Adair, c; Scurry, p; Beals, lf; Gibney, 1b; Zell, cf; Gordon, ss; Wood, rf; Buell, 2b; Bennett, 3b.

Score by innings:

Faculty	0 3 5 0 1 1 1—11
Sophomores	6 0 1 4 6 2 x—19

Piles Disappear

No Cutting or Salves Needed. External treatments seldom banish Piles and for the very good reason that the cause is inside—bad circulation in affected parts, veins are flabby and bowel walls weakened.

To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles you must free the circulation—send fresh, healthy blood to the raw, sensitive membranes. Internal treatment is one safe method. Ointments and other external treatments can't give lasting relief.

J. S. Leonhardt, M. D., a specialist, set at work some years ago to find a real internal remedy for piles. He succeeded. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and it has proven successful in thousands of cases—so success that now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists under a money back guarantee. It is a harmless tablet, easy to take, and can always be found at H. L. Sayre, who will promptly refund the purchase price if you are dissatisfied. —Adv.

OLD TILTON STORE

WE ACCEPT THE CHALLENGE
OF THE

6 THINGS TO REMEMBER Mentioned By Our Competitors

1. TRIMMING PAPER—Trimming paper is a step BACKWARD not FORWARD. The WISE BUYER KNOWS paper should NEVER BE TRIMMED BEFORE THE PASTE IS APPLIED. The selvage on our paper is a PROTECTION TO THE PAPER in shipping, and handling and allows the PASTE TO BE APPLIED without DAMAGING OR SOILING THE ACTUAL PAPER while hanging. ASK OUR PATRONS.
2. WE DELIVER PAPER—Inasmuch as we bring this special display of Wall Paper into your town, naturally, WE Pay THE POSTAGE AND THE PAPER IS DELIVERED TO YOUR DOOR. ASK OUR PATRONS.
3. THE PAPER HANGER—We are MERCHANTS OF WALL PAPER, selling DIRECT TO PATRONS. The PAPER HANGER is a SKILLED MECHANIC. WE SELL you the paper—YOU EMPLOY the paper hanger. This is right. Do you ask the LUMBERMAN to get you the CARPENTER? NO. We do not allow any PAPER HANGER TO CHARGE A COMMISSION on our paper, nor do we CHARGE OUR PATRONS A COMMISSION ON THE HANGING. We pass this on TO OUR PATRONS. ASK OUR PATRONS.
4. ACCEPTING RETURNS—With us, the CUSTOMER IS ALWAYS RIGHT. Any paper NOT USED or NOT SATISFACTORY is redeemable in cash. ASK OUR PATRONS.
5. BORDER—Our competitors admit that THEY WILL NOT SELL YOU ANY SIDE WALL UNLESS ABOVE 10c., without YOU TAKE BORDER. On page 88, of our sample book you will find the rules governing our sales; YOU CAN BUY ANY SIDE WALL of 7 1-2c. PER ROLL or ABOVE WITH or WITHOUT THE BORDER. There are THOUSANDS OF THESE BOOKS sent thru the mail. There are 2000 OF THEM IN THE HANDS OF XENIA PATRONS. TRUTHFUL ADVERTISING ALWAYS PAYS.
6. SHADING OF PAPERS—The SLOGAN upon which our tremendous business has been built, is SATISFACTION OR MONEY BACK, and we will cheerfully replace any paper sold by us which DOES NOT COME UP TO EXPECTATIONS, regardless of WHAT THE COMPLAINT MAY BE. ASK OUR PATRONS.

1c PAPER AND THE BORDER—ROOM SIZE—Our room prices are figured on the basis of a room 12x14, which requires 12 rolls of side wall and 20 yards of border. On Page 88 of our book in the rules governing our sales, it is plainly stated that we require our customers on our 1c, 3 3-4c and 5c papers to take the border in the proportion of 20 yds. to each 12 rolls of side wall. In other words, if your room requires only 10 rolls of side wall, you are required to buy only 15 yards of border. Now compare our price and use your head; 10 rolls of side wall at 1c per roll, 10c, 15 yards of border at 3c per yard equals 45c, making the total room price 55c, as against the admitted price of our competitor of 75c. On this basis we will sell anybody as many carloads as they have the money to buy. REMEMBER—On any paper of 7 1-2c or above you can purchase the side wall with or without the border.

OUR FREE SAMPLE BOOK—This special display of Wall Papers carry no special reduced prices. They are our regular papers. Among them will be found each and every pattern shown in our marvelous 1927 sample book. As stated before this book is sent thru the mail into every state in the Union and there is not a single word of untruthful advertising in it. In 30 years we have established a reputation of which we are proud. Our patrons in this community are many and this special display of Wall Papers will remain in Xenia for

Trademarked Goods The Fruit of Experience

"That was the best cloth I ever had. I wish I could get some more." How often you hear such remarks, or perhaps make them yourself.

Trademarked goods are a very practical solution of the difficulty. If an article has pleased you, you can ask for it again; if not, you know what to avoid.

The J. C. Penney Company May Festival of trademarked goods is an appropriate continuation of the April Silver Anniversary. When we hand out a trademarked article we are saying "Here is the benefit of our 25 years of merchandising experience. Behind this name stands the honor of a great Company."

Keep Eliminative System Active

Good Health Requires Good Elimination.

ONE can't feel well when there is a retention of poisonous waste in the blood. This is called a toxic condition, and is apt to make one tired, dull and languid. Other symptoms are sometimes toxic backaches and headaches. That the kidneys are not functioning properly is often shown by scanty or burning passage of secretions. Many people have learned the value of Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, when the kidneys seem functionally inactive. Everywhere one finds enthusiastic Doan's users. Ask your neighbor!

So Many Endure Catarrh Needlessly

Why bear with the distress of stopped-up head, constant phlegm in the throat, irritating mucus discharge, or other unpleasant effects of catarrh when thousands have proved that you, too, can get rid of catarrh.

Catarrh is an inflamed condition of the mucous membrane—the delicate lining of nose, throat and head. Clear that up, and catarrh—catarrhal bad breath—and catarrhal deafness disappear.

Hall's Catarrh Medicine has been successful in the treatment of catarrh for over 40 years. Ask your druggist. Price 85c. F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio.

VETERAN PRINTER GETS WATCH

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright, 1927 KENOSHA, Wis., May 5.—Fifty years in front of type cases is the record set by Dwight House, now 65 years old, who began to be a printer as an apprentice when he was 16 and recently celebrated his typographical jubilee.

A typical old school printer, House has a certain lofty contempt for machine typography, although he admits that inventions unknown when he was a young man have added considerable speed to typesetting processes.

"Faster, yes," says House, still in his prime and with slight dimmed, still active in front of a type case, "but for a really artistic, satisfactory and 100 per cent accurate printing job, where can you beat the old hand-set method? Nimble fingers and the human brain form a typographical combination that no machinery can hope to equal."

The Kenosha branch of the International Typographical Union of which House is a member of long standing, took proper cognizance of his recent jubilee. He was entertained by the union membership, and after speeches had been made complimenting him, a gold watch, suitably engraved was presented to "Kenosha's oldest printer."

"NO MACHINE CAN EVER SET TYPE THE WAY HUMAN FINGERS CAN SET IT," SAYS DWIGHT HOUSE. FOR FIFTY YEARS A PRINTER

HER MAN BEATRICE BURTON

FOREVER MATED © JOHNSON FEATURES INC. 1926

READ THIS FIRST: SYLVIA STARR has been engaged to Randall Phelps for a year when he asks her to free him, because he's fallen in love with her chum, FAY SHIRLEY.

Heartbroken, Sylvia gives him up, much to the satisfaction of her AUNT AGONY, the shrewd old maid who reared her. Aunt Agony says Ranny will never be true to any woman for very long. Her opinion of him seems to be correct, too. For suddenly he drops Fay and Sylvia marries him, after all.

Their married life is not happy to start with. For Ranny hates to be tied down, and gradually he returns to his old habits—having love affairs after love affairs, and gambling with his old cronies. He spends so much money on himself that Sylvia has to give music lessons to keep things going.

When the baby is born, Sylvia has to turn the dark little bedroom room of their tiny flat into a bedroom for him. And when he finally dies, Sylvia has a nervous breakdown—refusing ever to go into the flat again, and refusing to see Ranny. But he finally convinces her that he loves her, even though he is having a love affair with a girl in his office at the time of the baby's death, and couldn't be found for hours. And she comes back to him, and they make a fresh start.

With $2000 that Sylvia made writing a song, they begin payments on the Little White House where the second baby, a girl, is born. Ranny settled down to business in his father's firm of JAMESON PHILIPS & SON, and everything goes well until BABS DELANO comes to town.

Babs, a librarian, is a guest at Sylvia's house while she hunts a flat. Failing to attract PETER WILK, a bachelor who once asked Sylvia to marry him, Babs turns her attention upon Ranny. One night she tells Ranny that Peter is in love with Sylvia, and Ranny puts him out of the house. The next day Peter's old sister, MISS SARAH WILK, who has known Sylvia from childhood, sends for her and tells her that Peter cares for her, and asks her not to have him at her house any more.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER LI. ALL the way home in her taxi cab Sylvia thought over what Sarah had just told her.

Of course, she herself had always known that Peter was half in love with her. She had grown used to the fact—just as she had grown used to the fact that Sarah is green and sunshine warm. It meant very little to her, one way or the other.

She had known it long before Ranny had pointed it out to her by his insane jealousy of Peter.

She had known it long before Babs had giggled about it in her taxi cab. She had known about it long before this morning, when Sarah had told her that sometimes Peter walked the floor for hours after he came home from his visits to the Little White House.

It was hard to believe. Somehow, Sylvia couldn't imagine Peter, the staid and the matter-of-fact Peter, losing sleep over her or any other woman.

But she knew that it was true, or Sarah never would have sent for her to tell her about it. Sarah wasn't the kind of person who imagined things.

"But why in the world couldn't Peter have fallen in love with Babs, and married her?" she asked herself, as she paid the taxi driver and turned toward the Little White House. "She would have made a humdinger of a wife for him. Both of them are crazy about books and pictures and things."

Then she stopped thinking about Peter and Babs Delano, as she stopped halfway up the front walk, to admire the Little White House. Her eyes passed over the windows with their dotted muslin curtains, and the window boxes filled with tiny evergreens, to the door with its brass knocker and the fan-light above it.

She loved the little house almost as if it were alive. Its friendly walls, with its sun shining on them, held all her earthly happiness. Ranny and the baby, and her love for them.

"Oh, but I wish Babs would find a flat and go," Sylvia thought for the hundredth time, as she fitted her key into the lock, and opened the door.

She liked Babs, of course, in a way. But she had been here for nearly two weeks now, and was fast wearing out her welcome.

For one thing, she never helped with the work. And Sylvia and the little maid got up three elaborate meals a day for her. That took time, not to mention money.

Sylvia felt like telling her that Ranny didn't mind the spending part of it, though. She might also have told her that Ranny hated any kind of work, having the sunny, lazy disposition of a happy-go-lucky hobo.

"Look here, Babs," she almost snapped at her. "Don't you start putting wild ideas into Ranny's head. He's just beginning to settle down to his job. He's just beginning to make something of himself—He'd never study architecture, or anything else, or even read anything but detective stories and the sport page of the paper. He's about as artistic as Jack Dempsey."

Babs gave her a pitying look. "You don't understand Ranny," she drawled. "You don't know him like I do."

Sylvia gazed after her as she went up stairs, dragging her coffee-stained morning dress after her.

"Well," she breathed, "I certainly will be jiggered!"

But that was only the beginning of the thing.

It came in that throaty, silky voice of Babs. "I know, but it seems a shame that a man like you ever married," she said, "with all your ideas and a little time, you would have made an architect—the biggest architect in the country. I'm sure of it."

Sylvia could have laughed. Ranny couldn't draw one straight line after another. And what he didn't know about houses would fill a book—a whole library of books.

It was all Father Phelps could do to make Ranny get down to business long enough to sell houses, let alone plan them. Ranny's business was a by-word in the Phelps family.

"If Sylvia were—Well, if Sylvia were a different kind of wife than she is, she'd make you do the thing you want to do," Babs' smooth voice went on. "She wouldn't insist upon having this house and an automobile. If I were married to a man like you, Ranny—"

Her voice died away on a melan- choly note, and Sylvia found herself grinding her teeth together in silent rage. To think that Babs would slant her like this in her own house!

But she was smiling when she stepped into the room five minutes later, and greeted Babs and Ranny.

"Well, I'm back," she said gaily. "For goodness' sake, Ranny, what are you doing home at this hour of the morning? You had an appointment with Tom Boyle this morning at ten thirty, you know."

He looked at her frowning for a minute, and then dragged his long body up from the chair.

"I didn't go to the office on time for once!" he asked, and inwardly Sylvia gave a little gasp. It was more than a year since Ranny had used that kind of tone to her.

When he had gone, Babs asked for a cup of coffee. Sylvia brought her a little tray, and found her a cigarette.

"Here's the paper, too. I thought you might want to look through the ads for a flat," she said bluntly. "I know you're not very comfortable here."

Babs flushed, but she took the paper and began to hunt through its "For Rent" columns.

"I think I'll have Ranny take me to look at a couple of these places this afternoon," she said easily, when she had finished with the paper, and was drinking her coffee.

She got up and went out into the hall to telephone Ranny.

Then she came trailing back into the room where Sylvia was brushing up the ashes that she and Ranny had dropped on the carpet, during their heart-to-heart talk.

"I'll be glad to go back to work," she said languidly. "I don't see how a girl of your intelligence can stand just four walls all day. I used to want to get married—but now I'm thankful that I didn't. Why be a wife? Wives get the little end of everything." She looked soulfully out of the window.

"What do you mean?" Sylvia asked. Babs laughed. "Oh, they learn to think about nothing but bread-puddings and babies," she said. "They don't have their husband's confidence. They don't share his dreams, even though they share his house with him."

Sylvia gave her a keen glance with those blue eyes of hers.

"Don't be silly, Babs," she said sharply. "All you see is the outside of marriage. Wait until you're a wife, and you'll know more about it."

Babs smiled mysteriously under her lipstick.

"Sylvia, I've your own case," she drawled. "You don't even know that I'm an artist. You don't even suspect that he longs to plan wonderful buildings—poems in steel and stone. You don't know that he hates the sordid part of business, the money-grabbing part of it."

Babs returns to Sylvia's home, saying she is lonesome. Sylvia makes a startling discovery and makes a solemn demand upon Babs. Ranny also is criticized.

the pigment test tells you the house paint to use . .

SEEING is believing! We were undecided ourselves about what made good house paint until we saw the pigment test. Look at the black panel below! Note that of the six pigments used in house paint only white lead and white zinc—the pigments used in Devco Lead and Zinc Paint—form opaque white films that completely cover and hide the surface. The others all form translucent films. That's why Devco covers better, spreads farther, gives greater protection.

Make sure today, that you are using the right oil in your Ford.

Smoothness and economy depend upon the oil you use

Only a specially-compounded light-bodied oil—Polarine F—can give best results in your Ford. There are several reasons why this is so.

The Ford motor is a high speed motor and requires an oil which flows freely and quickly to all engine parts.

It is a high compression motor in which carbon formation is more serious, hence an oil of low carbon tendency is required.

Its bearing construction requires an oil light enough to penetrate quickly to bearing surfaces, yet of sufficient body to withstand heat and pressure.

The splash system of lubrication is used, requiring a light-bodied oil which will atomize readily when splashed by the connecting rods.

Polarine F also has the second vital Ford oil characteristic. It keeps transmission bands soft and pliable—prevents chatter and grab.

Our recommendation of Polarine F for Fords is based on our own experience with these cars as well as the judgment of lubrication engineers.

Change crank-case oil every 500 miles and refill with Polarine F. For chassis lubrication use Polarine BB (for differential gears) and Polarine Cup Grease. These high-quality lubricants are available everywhere in Ohio to help you get best results from your Ford.

SHIPS BRING FLOOD SURVIVORS TO CITY FROM REFUGE SPOTS

Huge Relief Machine Cares For Refugees Of Stricken Area

VICKSBURG, Miss., May 5.—From north, south, east and west the broken haggard lives of homeless and hopeless continued today to converge upon historic Vicksburg.

More than sixteen thousand were in five camps about the city before noon and still the motley fleet which is Louisiana's salvation rushed back and forth across the Mississippi's inland sea to bring in yet more from the levees, the house-tops and the trees.

For ten days, Vicksburg has been receiving flood victims with open arms. Stunned by the enormity of the task which has been thrust upon her, she is yet calm and resolute in her purpose to care for all who come to her for food and shelter.

The refugee registration at Red Cross headquarters is only a little short of the normal population of the city. Regular business for the most part goes by the boards while shopkeepers, professional and business men, tradesmen and servants devote themselves to their places in the great relief machine which has sprung up in the city. Housewives are busy with their tasks of providing clothing for the utterly destitute in the camps. Business men and tradesmen have taken over the matter of supplies and shipments, professional men are looking after sanitation and sickness in the camps.

The St. Louis aviator may fly a Ryan monoplane equipped with Wright-Whirlwind engine. His plane has been christened "The Spirit of St. Louis."

Rene Fonck, who was overtaken by disaster last September, has again entered the contest and will be permitted to point his plane eastward on June 27 or soon thereafter. Contestants are required to give sixty day notices before starting so that the ships may be officially inspected, barographs installed and sealed, and so that sufficient time will be given the airmen to exercise every precaution necessary to insure the safety of their ships during the flight.

Fonck is as yet undecided as to what type of plane he will use, though he is expected to choose between a Sikorsky S-37 twin-engine ship and a Sikorsky S-36 type bi-plane. The ship that was burned during the take-off at Mineola, L. I., last fall was of the former type.

No entries have been received from any other prospective trans-Atlantic fliers. Forth Adams, president of the National Aeronautic Association, told International News Service today. He said he knew nothing of the plans of Commander Richard E. Byrd, Clarence D. Chamberlain or Lloyd W. Bertaud beyond what he had read in the newspapers.

Byrd, Chamberlain or Bertaud attempt the flight, they must fly under the rules of the national association or of the Federation Aeronaute Internationale de Paris, if their records are to be officially accepted. These rules are to be officially accepted. These rules are to be officially accepted.

RUSSIA THREATENS TO LEAVE MEETING

GENEVA, May 5.—The Russian delegation to the League of Nations economic conference today threatened withdrawal.

Resenting the Swiss precautions to protect them from the Russian delegates declared they are virtual prisoners and served notice on Secretary Sir Eric Drummond that they will withdraw from the conference unless the police measures are modified.

The Russians have been compelled to ride in special automobiles with police escort and the corridors of their hotel have been under heavy guard.

Sir Eric Drummond promised to ask the Swiss authorities to make the protection less stringent and the Russians thereupon agreed to attend the morning session of the conference.

FRENCH FLYER DEFIES ORDER TO FLY ACROSS ATLANTIC

TROOPS CHECK RACE RIOTS AFTER NEGRO LYNCHED BY WHITES

Second Negro Beaten And White Youth Shot By Mobs

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., May 5.—Armed troops patrolled the streets here today to prevent a race riot following the lynching of one negro, the beating and threatened lynching of a second and the wounding of a white boy by mobs that took control of Little Rock last night.

John Carter, 38, negro, was lynched and his body thrown on a funeral pyre in the negro section and a second negro was found to be armed and was severely beaten only to be saved by a white man who pleaded with the mob to let him put him in jail.

Robert Love, 18, white youth, was accidentally shot by the mob while parading through the negro section firing indiscriminately.

Found hiding in a tree, Carter confessed to the mob that he had earlier in the day attacked Mrs. B. E. Stewart and her daughter as they drove into Little Rock. Mrs. Stewart was taken from the hospital by the mob, identified the negro positively, and stood thirty feet away and watched him hang to a tree and riddled with bullets.

The negro's body was tied behind an automobile and dragged through the main section of the city and then through the negro district.

The automobile was followed by more than a thousand members of the mob. In the heart of the negro section, the body was placed on a bonfire and burned to a crisp. Negroes fled as the mobs marched through the streets for hours. Governor Martineau, called out troops and these were patrolling the streets today.

BARE KNEES WILL NOT BAR PUPIL

CLEVELAND, O., May 5.—Gertrude Bates, 8, will attend school wearing abbreviated stockings, as usual.

When the little girl was sent home by her teacher with orders to cover her knees, the matter was taken up with the superintendent and the director of health work in the schools. Each declared no such order had been handed down from his office. The director of health work, Dr. L. W. Childs, said he was in favor of "bare knees."

"The more body surface exposed to the wind and sun the better," said Dr. Childs. "Children should get all the sunlight possible through the skin. It helps to build bone."

FORMER CHICAGO GIRL WHO SHOT LOVER DEFENDANT IN PARIS DIVORCE SUIT

PARIS, May 5.—The Count de Janze has filed a petition for divorce from the countess, who was formerly Alice Silverthorne of Chicago.

The countess several weeks ago shot and seriously injured Raymond De Trafford, son of an English baronet, and then shot herself, inflicting serious wounds. It was learned that the shooting occurred after the countess had fears that De Trafford would not marry her if she secured a divorce from the count. The count had been quoted as stating that he was preparing to give the countess a divorce if De Trafford would marry her.

The count in his petition today charges the countess with having abandoned the conjugal domicile. The count and countess were married in Chicago on September 21, 1921.

A close friend of the countess was today asked if it had not been primarily intended for the countess to ask for the divorce. "Alice was going to ask for a di-

HOPE OF RESCUING ENTOMBED MINERS ALIVE IS ABANDONED

Nurses Withdrawn As Authorities Become Convinced All Are Dead—Boss Reveals Story Of Explosion

EVERETTSTVILLE, W. Va., May 5.—Wade Wilson, youthful car dispatcher, was in telephone conversation with outside offices when the explosion at the New England Fuel and Transportation Co. here snuffed out his life and those of ninety-three other miners, it was revealed today by John Spiker, pit boss.

While rescue crews searched the wrecked mine for the bodies of sixty-five unrecaptured victims, Spiker told of events immediately preceding the terrible explosion, which was of such force as to kill three men working outside the mine mouth and wrecked the tippie on which they were at work.

Spiker's office is located at the pit mouth. It is connected by a system of signal lights with each dispatcher's shanty inside the mine. A few minutes before the blast Spiker said the light at Wilson's station, 4,000 feet from the entry, went out.

The pit boss rang Wilson's phone and the dispatcher answered. "Just a minute until I see what's the matter," Wilson told Spiker when the pit boss told him the light was out. These were the last words Wilson spoke. His body is believed to be one of the last five of twenty-nine which have been located.

"Just as Wilson finished talking a sheet of flame shot out of the mine mouth," Spiker said. "My office was enveloped in smoke and a moment later I heard the tippie collapse and crash 100 feet to the ground."

The body believed to be Wilson's but burned almost beyond possible identification was found near the phone. The bodies of two other miners, thought to be Charles Willard and Jim Murphy, were found nearby.

Convinced that no miners will be brought from the mine alive, the staff of Red Cross nurses was reduced to a minimum today. They are being kept at the mine primarily to treat injured rescue workers.

COURTHOUSE, Long Island City, N. Y., May 5.—No one today questions the truth of Henry Judd Gray's crimson story as told by him from the witness stand late yesterday. It rang true, every word of it. You might have doubted some of Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder's testimony but Judd Gray's story was unquestionably the outpouring of a tortured soul.

It was as dramatic a recital as was ever heard in a courtroom. It was almost petrified the spectators. "I struck him (Albert Snyder) with the sashweight on the head. As nearly as I could see, one blow. I think I hit him another blow. He

Ruth Planned Scheme To Avert Suspicion Says Salesman

COURTHOUSE, Long Island City, N. Y., May 5.—Henry Judd Gray, self-confessed murderer, resumed the witness stand today to finish his melodramatic story of the vicious slaying of Albert Snyder. He sat calmly in the witness box, peering through horn-rimmed glasses, seemingly none the worse from his ordeal of yesterday when he described in dreadful detail the bloody killing of the art editor.

The blonde Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder, his co-defendant, whom he has pictured as a deliberate murderess who forced him finally to slay her sleeping husband, sat pale and shaken at her counsel's table, watching her former lover's face apprehensively. Anguish was written all over her blanched countenance. All her old spirit and defiance were gone.

Gray, under questions of his attorney, Samuel L. Miller, proceeded with his blood-chilling story in a clear, precise voice.

The courtroom was again packed to the very doors, most of the spectators were women.

Miller continued the questioning. Q. Mr. Gray, last evening you told us about the burning of certain articles in the cellar of the Snyder home after the killing of Albert Snyder on the morning of March 20. Please proceed with what happened. A. I was in the room of Mrs. Brown (Mrs. Snyder's mother). Mrs. Snyder disappeared. She returned shortly and I asked her where she had been. She said she had burned my shirt, her nightgown and bathrobe in the furnace. I put on shirt (Snyder's blue shirt which Mrs. Snyder had given him to replace his bloody one) and we went downstairs.

Q. What did you do next? A. I swept around the coal bin so that my shoeprints would not show.

Q. What else? A. I also

DEFICIT WILL FACE STATE TRACY TELLS GOVERNOR DONAHAY

Urges Governor And Legislature To Take Action

COLUMBUS, O., May 5.—Unless Governor Vic Donahay and members of the Ohio legislature take action along lines of curtailing expenditures and providing for additional revenue, a deficit of approximately $20,000,000 will exist in the state's general revenue fund by the close of the 18-months' fiscal period ending Dec. 31, 1928, State Auditor Joseph T. Tracy estimated today.

At the request of the governor, Tracy submitted to Donahay late Wednesday figures and estimates relative to the financial condition of the Ohio treasury.

Tracy told the governor that the deficit in the state treasury on June 30, next, is estimated to approximate $12,800,000.

Based upon existing appropriations, present taxation measures and those passed at the present legislative session, Tracy informed Donahay of his estimate that the deficit in the state's general revenue fund would be increased about $7,150,000 during the 18-months' period beginning July 1, next. This would raise the deficit to about $20,000,000 by Dec. 31, 1928.

GRAY'S DRAMATIC STORY BARES HIS SOUL

It was no wonder, as this blood-curdling tale came grating through the radio amplifiers, that Warren Schneider, the slain man's brother, fainted; that four of his sisters had to be assisted from the room; that Gray's mother wept; that Mrs. Snyder's mother wept and that even the "bloody blonde" herself broke down and wept. Even the most hardened reporters felt a shiver shoot up their spines as the voice of a screech as he described the climax of the terrible tragedy.

The gibbering little corset salesman resumes the stand today but anything further he will say will be an anti-climax for those who heard that story yesterday.

ANSWER TO BRITISH GIVES CURT REBUKE FOR REVIVING ISSUE

Blunt Rejoinder To England Says Question Is "Closed"

WASHINGTON, May 5.—The United States informed the world today that the matter of international war debts is a closed book so far as Washington is concerned. This is the practical effect of Secretary of State Kellogg's curt note to the British government, answering a formal communication from London which sought to make a controversy out of an exchange of letters between Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, and John Grier Hibben, president of Princeton.

"The government of the United States regards the correspondence between Mr. Mellon and Mr. Hibben as a purely domestic discussion, and does not desire to engage in any formal diplomatic exchanges on the subject," said Kellogg's note.

For brevity and bluntness, this government's icy rejoinder to the British communication is almost unprecedented in diplomatic exchanges between London and Washington. It is, in effect a thinly disguised rebuke to the British foreign office for taking up something that was not addressed to the British in the first place.

It constitutes, as well, the second diplomatic slap that Washington has handed London this week, the other occasion being President Coolidge's advice to the American people to disregard much of the British-colored news that is now emanating from London and the Far East concerning America's Chinese policy.

While the Kellogg note made it clear this government has no intention of arguing with the British foreign office over the merits of the British-American debt settlement, the contentions advanced by the British were promptly answered by Secretary Mellon in a public statement. He stood pat on his letter to Mr. Hibben, and using the same figures cited by Winston Churchill, the chancellor of the exchequer, showed that by next year Britain will be receiving from her debtors more than enough money to make the annual payments on Britain's debt to the United States.

While regretting the re-appearance of the debt controversy, administration officials on the whole are just as well satisfied to have it come up and disposed of at this time. It has been expected for some time that some of the foreign debtors would take advantage of the occasion afforded by the present economic conference at Geneva to attempt to re-open the agitation for debt cancellation.

The British government's action in raising the question before the economic conference had a chance to do so has thus afforded the American government the opportunity it desired to slam the door once and for all on this controversy. The Kellogg note constituted an icy reminder to all Europe that this government regards the question of war debts as having been disposed of, and will not consent to engage in an argument or recrimination over a dead issue.

The approving signature of the governor was attached to the Laybourne bill, legalizing sale of church property without a court order, and the Herbert bill, authorizing police departments to sell unclaimed automobiles after ninety days.

FIRE CHIEF WANTS ACCURATE ALARMS

Repeating a recent request, Fire Chief William Hanftan urges citizens, in phoning in a fire alarm, to be specific in furnishing information and supply firemen with explicit directions as to the location of the blaze in order to guard against delay.

Do not become excited but give more attention to details, the fire chief asks. The department should be furnished with the number of the house or building on fire, information as to the nearest street intersection and some person should station himself at a point of vantage and flag the fire truck as it comes by.

This co-operation on the part of Xenians is imperative, Chief Hanftan declares.

BIBLE THOUGHT

OUR HOPE.—And now, Lord, what wait I for? my hope is in thee. Deliver me from all my transgressions: make me not the reproach of the foolish. Psalm 39:7, 8.

AMERICAN POLICY IN CHINA

The United States government, while co-operating militarily with the other powers in their protective work in China, is apparently pursuing a course of its own diplomatically. This is a policy in which most Americans take genuine satisfaction.

Whatever reasons there may be for co-operating with other powers in international matters elsewhere, and there are many, the argument for unity has little application to China. European interests there are not ours. America has no concessions there, no seaports, no special holdings or rights or privileges of any kind. It has only the history and tradition of square dealing with China, and insistence that in trade matters all nations shall be treated alike.

America has been a consistent friend of China for half a century, while other powers have been grabbing territory and acquiring dubious privileges of many kinds which they now feel called on to defend. It is no part of American duty to help the other powers hold those privileges. America is not obligated to pull any of their chestnuts out of the fire, or join them in coercing China to provide more chestnuts.

America asks only for fair treatment of Americans, and protection for American life and property, and will stand a better chance of getting these benefits by playing a lone hand than by helping the game of the imperialistic powers.

Great Britain, France and Italy seem to feel very bad about it. They might feel better if they would follow the American example. And they may do that very thing. If America stands pat on her own policy of justice to China and non-interference in Chinese affairs.

WORLD AIR RULES

The International Aviation Congress in London has been making air traffic rules, which are needed and will soon be needed worse.

There is to be no more "jay-flying." An aviator following a railroad or canal must not wobble or cross at a slant, but when he finds it necessary to cross over, must do so at a right angle, as pedestrians are supposed to do on the street.

Americans, readily agreeing to that, will not like so well the left-hand rule adopted. Following any recognized airway, aviators are supposed to keep to the left instead of the right. This rule was obtained by England and other left-handed nations, and may make trouble for American and Canadian fliers—though a right-hand rule would probably make equal trouble for the other fellows.

Less comprehensible is the effort of the British and French delegates to drop the name "aeroplane," which in America is generally simplified in "airplane," and use instead "aerodrome." They will have more trouble putting that over.

TEACHING WITH MOVIES

Public schools in twelve American cities next fall will experiment with moving pictures as educational aids. Some forty moving pictures for use in the fourth, fifth and sixth grades in the study of geography, elementary science and hygiene will be shown. School authorities will check the results very carefully, to see just how effective these films are in comparison with the old methods of study.

To one who is not a teacher it seems as if the movie ought to be a magnificent way of getting little Johnnie to learn things that leave him absolutely cold when he studies about them in books. Many will await the result of this experiment with considerable interest.

NO MORE GUNS BY MAIL

May 10 is a notable day for one reason. On that day the law prohibiting the promiscuous use of the mails for the shipping of firearms will become effective. Congress enacted the law and Postmaster General New has sent a list of the regulations to all postmasters and responsible postal officials. From May 10 forward it should be difficult for gun-buyers to get their weapons from mail order houses and to make the United States government a party to their purchases by carrying the guns in the mail.

A fine of $1,000 and a two-year term in a federal penitentiary are the penalties for so using the mails.

Gunmen will still get hold of guns, but not quite so easily as before. Barring firearms from the mails is only one small move in their regulation, but it is one decidedly in the right direction.

If you disapprove of floods, this is a good time to plant a few trees.

Just One Thing After Another

KELLYGRAMS BY FRED C KELLY

IDEA DETONATORS NEEDED a fortune if I could only think of And so have you. Imagine having $51,000 out in the haymow and never thinking about it until somebody reminded you that it was there.

That is what happened to the New Rochelle, N. Y., man who chanced to read in the paper about the big price paid for the signature of old Button Gwinnet, one of the original signers of the Declaration of Independence.

He had known all along that among his father's papers was a letter signed by Gwinnet. But somehow it had not occurred to him before that the paper might be of great value.

After searching through a box of old papers in the barn, he found the letter which brought $51,000 at auction. Shortly afterward the barn burned down.

Only a modest amount of property is needed to see that the man was lucky to read in the paper just when he did, about the high value of Gwinnet signatures.

Yet the paper hadn't told him anything more important about the signature than he had known before. He had already been aware of the existence of the paper among his father's mementos and must have known vaguely that it might be valuable.

What he read in the paper simply set off his thoughts, just as a percussion cap set off the powder in a big gun. In other words, the newspaper item was a thought detonator.

Now, I wonder if thousands of us aren't in the same boat with the lucky Rochelle man. We may not have any valuable papers out in the barn, but we do have ideas in our heads that have never been touched off.

When an inventor, or a business man, makes a big success, by applying a bright idea, he probably uses no new knowledge but is simply reminded of something he already knew.

I firmly believe that I must have a dandy hunch in the attic of my brain that would make me there were only four left.

All the big department stores in the Capital of the Commonwealth have what they call "Fashion Advisers."

These are women with an artistic flair combined with a knowledge of good usage, to whom patrons, lacking what is known as "clothes sense," may appeal for assistance in the selection of purchase—usually attire.

The patron states her requirements to the "Fashion Adviser" who runs her trained blue eyes over the "prospects," diplomatically questioning her with respect to the quality and extent of her existing "ensemble."

When that's over, the "Adviser" adroitly ascertains the eccentricities of the customer's finances, and the final purchase consists of a balance carefully struck, between what is suited to type, environment and pocketbook.

There is a sidewalk stall in Forty-second street, just off Seventh avenue, where pineapple juice may be purchased at 10 cents a glass.

A few paces distant a beggar on crutches nightly installs himself, selling ancient ballads.

"Pineapple juice, 10 cents a glass," warbles the lad in the booth.

"De Face on De Barroom Floor," sings the copyist, the lad on crutches.

That's what the Eighteenth amendment has done for Forty-second street.

"Part of the price of prominence," says Montaigne, "is the absence of privacy."

To which Mazda Lane has appended the injunction: "So live that you never disappoint your press agent!"

prize. "Children of the Ritz," by Cornell Woolrich, is a still length novel. It will appear in Collier's Humors beginning with the August issue. Following that, Boni & Liveright will issue it in book form, and First National Pictures will make a feature photoplay of it.

Much critical attention will be turned upon it, and it is almost certain to establish the writing reputation of young Woolrich.

Two elaborate features which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is producing "Old Heidelberg" and "The Trial of '98" the latter a story of the Alaskan gold rush, both with large investments. It is a year of big money in film production and there is little hokum about the estimates.

His first production is "Listen Dearie," a musical comedy now meeting with popular success at the Chestnut St. Opera House, Philadelphia, where it is playing an indefinite engagement.

Dr. W. J. Sullivan is held by Los Angeles police with Dorothy Mackaye, actress. They're charged with concealing facts in the death of Ray Raymond, Miss Mackaye's husband. Paul Kelly, film actor and friend of the woman, is charged with the killing.

Cornell Woolrich, twenty-one years old and a resident of New York City, has been awarded the first prize of $10,000 for the best story submitted in the competition recently conducted by Collier's and First National Pictures. Both the established and unknown writer entered work on an equal footing although the tyro especially was urged to enter. The contest closed February 1, 1927, and thousands of manuscripts were considered. Either a short story, novelette or novel was eligible to win the

Keeping HEALTHY

By Dr. A. F. Currier

ILLUSIONS

Mrs. E. W.: "Will you write an article on illusions? I have not observed any mention of this subject in your health column. Do they lead to insanity or to any breakdown of the mind? There are doubtless others who would be interested in this subject as well as I."

An illusion has been defined by an eminent writer on diseases of the mind and nervous system, as an erroneous perception of external objects and their relations, and this term is used as a very good example a mirage in the desert, where a lake with its appropriate surroundings appears to be seen.

We are sure that no lake is there, but there is a difference in the density between the strata of air near the ground and those which are higher up, and the sky and clouds are reflected into these denser strata, producing the optical effect of a sheet of water.

The appearance is there of a picture which consciousness and past experience would seem to lake, but the appearance is illusory, the thing is not what it seems no matter whether we understand the real meaning or not.

If we know the scientific explanation, we simply look at it and perhaps admire it. If we are consumed with thirst and do not know its meaning, we rush forward to quench our thirst, only to find that we have been deceived.

Illusions happen to most of us rather frequently. If our minds are strong and well-trained we are not much influenced by them; if our minds are weak the constant repetition of the illusory phenomenon may sooner or later overcome us; we become unable to place the proper estimate upon events which happen to us, and the result may be the unbalancing of the mind with its power of judgment and discrimination.

Illusions may come to the insane—for comparatively few people are insane or unbalanced upon all subjects.

An insane person may even be able to detect an illusion. If he understands the science of optics, he may not be deceived by the mirage of the desert, but mental disease is very often steadily progressive and one who is thus afflicted may end by losing entire control of his reasoning powers on all subjects. An illusion is an optical deception. The sense of vision tells us, in the mirage, that we are looking at a lake; the judgment, the power of discrimination, the faculty of reasoning, corrects this error and tells us it is not a lake, but something else.

An illusion differs entirely from an hallucination, which is a mental conception of something which does not exist. One may be absolutely that a thing exists which exists only in his individual imagination.

The ex-Kaiser of Germany may believe absolutely that he is the embodiment of Frederick the Great. This is merely an hallucination, and entirely contrary to fact.

Unless I am very much mistaken his place in history will not be one which future generations of Germans will manifest any eagerness to discuss.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Miss S. M. T.: 1. Do you think fowls in this part of the United States (Providence, R. I.) are much troubled with tuberculosis, and would you advise me to continue eating raw eggs, as I have been doing with advantage? 2. Are soft-boiled eggs as high in food value as raw eggs? 3. What foods contain the most iron?

Answer:—1. If you eat fresh eggs, eggs that have not been incubated, I do not think you need fear that they will cause tuberculosis, which is far less common in fowls than in cattle. 2. Yes, and many who seem to be unable to eat raw eggs have little or no trouble when they are boiled. Do not let this disturb you. 3. Green vegetables, like spinach, peas, beans, celery, cabbage, etc., have iron and vitamins. There is also iron in eggs.

Ask Dr. Currier that medical question that has been puzzling you. Confine your letter to fifty words and send stamped, addressed envelope for reply. He cannot of course, make a medical diagnosis, and he reserves the right to decide as to the propriety of queries.

THE BIBLE

Editor, the Gazette:

After some observation and thought, I am not so sure "the book of books," should be read in our public schools THESE DAYS. For the very reason we are striving for peace, and to contend for the Bible in our public schools causes agitation which leads to trouble. During my public school and college days the Bible was read each morning. When a teacher in Indiana, I too, read the Bible each morning. Eight years ago as teacher in the public schools of Warren County, Ohio, my mother read the Bible each morning, besides leading her pupils with sacred songs.

The Bible when read in the home is the best ballast. When I was seven years old, one of my grandmothers died with her on her back in Cincinnati. She bought for me a pictorial Bible. In that Bible was a picture of the devil with big horns, which caused me to be afraid of the devil. I asked my grandmother to cut that leaf out. She said she would not dare to do such a thing as on the other side was God's word. So I had to let the picture of the devil remain.

The oldest institution in the world is the home. There were no homes worthy of the name until the Bible built them. The importance of the home as an agency for religious training can hardly be over-estimated. I make my strongest plea for the home altar, the glory of our common Anglo-Saxon history. During the World War I had charge of a Sunday School class of boys, seventeen to twenty years of age. Out of the class of twenty-two only one boy came from a home where the Bible was read. I fairly shuddered to learn this. My thought is expressed in the sixth chapter of Deuteronomy. The Bible may be taught through training. We must teach them to think thoughtfully. We must clearly distinguish between teaching and training. We teach most by what we tell, by imparting information. We train by what we do through conduct; we train by what we are through character. You teach the child to pray, but you do not pray. You are teaching him in one direction, training him in another. You teach him to attend the Bible School, but you take no interest in it, and never go yourself. You are teaching him to attend the school; you are training him away from it. And training is bound to win over teaching.

You teach your child to read the Bible. It is well, but it is not a vital force in your life or a moulding power in your character. The result? You are training your child for three hundred and sixty-five days, away from the Bible, through an occasional hour you are teaching him to read it. The altar, the atmosphere and the life, these are the most simple and most efficient means for the teaching of the Bible in the home.

In all I have said, I have said but one thing, in different ways. It is in the home that counts most. This is in accord with the divine intention. The home is God's first circle of society. Let the Bible dominate that circle of life, and it will become dominant in the larger circles of church and state. Most of the problems of the church, and Bible are solved in the home Bible school. Nay, more, it is the best solution of the great problem of leading souls to Christ.

PREVENTIVE AND PROTECTIVE MEASURES

Although I am going to talk today on preventive and protective measures necessary for skin beauty, I will not touch upon extreme cases of skin disorders which should really be classed as skin diseases.

There are many minor afflictions which girls and women suffer from, and which are preventable. In my opinion, preventive measures are the prime factor in the acquiring of a good complexion.

First and foremost is the cleanliness which I stressed in yesterday's article on the adolescent skin. The thin, dry skin must be consistently fed with rich oils, that is, a nourishing cream of the richest consistency should be massaged into this type of skin regularly. If the skin is too oily, it should be bathed with diluted alcohol or a tonic or astringent lotion, or dashed with cold water to keep it firm.

Women who live in climates where the atmosphere is continually moist, usually have a better complexion than women who live in extreme dry climates or high altitudes. Few people can begin to estimate how much complexions suffer because their possessors drink far too little water and the moisture that should exude through the skin at the rate of from two to three pints a day is so reduced in quantity that what does exude through the pores becomes acid and irritating and is so sparse that it renders the skin dry and parchment like.

Therefore, I must warn you to drink from eight to ten glasses of water a day, preferably upon rising, between meals and before retiring.

So in summarizing, let me say, the essentials are drinking plenty of water, adopting a sensible diet, going in for abundant exercise and plenty of sleep, as well as the consistent use of cleansing and nourishing creams or clarifying skin foods as your particular case dictates, and an astringent that suits the condition of your skin.

WIFE PRESERVERS

Always scald rhubarb before cooking, for it requires so much less sugar and yet loses none of its flavor.

Under Arrest

Dr. W. J. Sullivan is held by Los Angeles police with Dorothy Mackaye, actress. They're charged with concealing facts in the death of Ray Raymond, Miss Mackaye's husband. Paul Kelly, film actor and friend of the woman, is charged with the killing.

The Theatre

What's a mere million dollars? This year's picture productions would indicate that it is not such an enormous sum as you might imagine. Nearly every big company is releasing at least one feature which has cost somewhere in seven figures.

"The King of Kings" cost approximately $2,000,000. "Wings," and the "Rough Riders," together rated at $3,000,000. "Uncle Tom's Cabin," $1,500,000 and "Sunrise" at $1,000,000. And now First National is planning to spend a like amount on both "The Miracle" and "The Patent Leather Kid," the latter a war film of the tank corps, featuring Richard Barthelmess. "The Wedding March" has already cost $1,250,000 and Erich Von Stroheim is said to be considering adding a few more sequences. At last reports, the picture had thirty reels.

Cornell Woolrich, twenty-one years old and a resident of New York City, has been awarded the first prize of $10,000 for the best story submitted in the competition recently conducted by Collier's and First National Pictures. Both the established and unknown writer entered work on an equal footing although the tyro especially was urged to enter. The contest closed February 1, 1927, and thousands of manuscripts were considered. Either a short story, novelette or novel was eligible to win the prize. "Children of the Ritz," by Cornell Woolrich, is a still length novel. It will appear in Collier's Humors beginning with the August issue. Following that, Boni & Liveright will issue it in book form, and First National Pictures will make a feature photoplay of it. Much critical attention will be turned upon it, and it is almost certain to establish the writing reputation of young Woolrich.

Two elaborate features which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is producing "Old Heidelberg" and "The Trial of '98" the latter a story of the Alaskan gold rush, both with large investments. It is a year of big money in film production and there is little hokum about the estimates.

Charles Gilpin, for several years the composer of Mask and Wig shows for the University of Pennsylvania, has become a professional producer. His first production is "Listen Dearie," a musical comedy now meeting with popular success at the Chestnut St. Opera House, Philadelphia, where it is playing an indefinite engagement.

CENTRAL HIGH INVITED TO PLAY TOLEDO GRID TEAM NEXT FALL

Central High School's 1927 football team has been invited to appear in Toledo, O., next season for a game with the Cathedral Latin High School eleven of that city. It is learned. The invitation was in the nature of an inquiry. The game would complete Central's 1927 grid schedule besides furnishing the team with its best road game of the season. School officials have not indicated, however, whether the invitation will be rejected or accepted.

FACULTY DEFEATED BY SOPHOMORES IN SOFT BALL CONTEST

Sophomores surprised by defeating the faculty of Central High School in an intra-mural league soft ball game by a score of 19 to 11 in what is known as one of those hectic games Wednesday at Cox Memorial Athletic Field.

The yearlings started off in fine fashion scoring six runs in the opening inning. Faculty retaliated with three in the second and five in the third, to go into the lead 8 to 7. After this hitting display, the attack of the teachers faded away while the students were tallying four times in the fourth, six in the fifth and two more in the sixth.

Kolb led the faculty at bat with three hits, besides scoring three runs himself. Buell crossed the plate five times for the victors. Errors were plentiful.

Faculty lineup: Bond, c; Bantyne, p; Haws, 2b; Kolb, ss; Patterson, cf; Pendry, 1b; Hampson, 3b; Ketter, rf; Doak, lf; Sophomore lineup: Adair, c; Scurrey, p; Beals, lf; Gibney, 1b; Zell, cf; Gordon, ss; Wood, rf; Buell, 2b; Bennett, 3b.

Score by innings:
Faculty 0 3 5 0 11—11
Sophomores 6 0 1 4 2 x—19

CENTRAL GOLFERS TO PLAY TROY HIGH

Troy High School will furnish the opposition in the first inter-city match of the season for Central High School's golf team. It is announced.

The match will be played at Troy, Saturday, May 14, and Coach Kolb's proteges are confident of giving a good account of themselves.

HURT IN RUNAWAY

Don't expect a single bottle to do it all at once but one bottle we know will show you beyond all question that you have at last discovered the way to solid foot comfort.

Remember that Moone's Emerald Oil is a clean, powerful, penetrating Antiseptic Oil that does not stain or leave a greasy residue and that it must give complete satisfaction or your money cheerfully refunded.

Piles Disappear

No Cutting or Salves Needed. External treatments seldom banish Piles and for the very good reason that the cause is inside—bad circulation in affected parts, veins are flabby and bowel walls weakened.

To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles you must free the circulation—send fresh, healthy blood to the raw, sensitive membranes. Internal treatment is one safe method. Ointments and other external treatments can't give lasting relief.

J. S. Leonard, M. D., a specialist, set at work some years ago to find a real internal remedy for piles. He succeeded. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and it has proven successful in thousands of cases—so success that now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists under a money back guarantee. It is a harmless tablet, easy to take, and can always be found at H. L. Sayre, who will promptly refund the purchase price if you are dissatisfied.

OLD TILTON STORE

WE ACCEPT THE CHALLENGE
OF THE

6 THINGS TO REMEMBER Mentioned By Our Competitors

1. TRIMMING PAPER—Trimming paper is a step BACKWARD not FORWARD. The WISE BUYER KNOWS paper should NEVER BE TRIMMED BEFORE THE PASTE IS APPLIED. The selvage on our paper is a PROTECTION TO THE PAPER in shipping, and handling and allows the PASTE TO BE APPLIED without DAMAGING OR SOILING THE ACTUAL PAPER while hanging. ASK OUR PATRONS.
2. WE DELIVER PAPER—Inasmuch as we bring this special display of Wall Paper into your town, naturally, WE Pay THE POSTAGE AND THE PAPER IS DELIVERED TO YOUR DOOR. ASK OUR PATRONS.
3. THE PAPER HANGER—We are MERCHANTS OF WALL PAPER, selling DIRECT TO PATRONS. The PAPER HANGER is a SKILLED MECHANIC. WE SELL you the paper—YOU EMPLOY the paper hanger. This is right. Do you ask the LUMBERMAN to get you the CARPENTER? NO. We do not allow any PAPER HANGER TO CHARGE A COMMISSION on our paper, nor do we CHARGE OUR PATRONS A COMMISSION ON THE HANGING. We pass this on TO OUR PATRONS. ASK OUR PATRONS.
4. ACCEPTING RETURNS—With us, the CUSTOMER IS ALWAYS RIGHT. Any paper NOT USED or NOT SATISFACTORY is redeemable in cash. ASK OUR PATRONS.
5. BORDER—Our competitors admit that THEY WILL NOT SELL YOU ANY SIDE WALL UNLESS ABOVE 10c., without YOU TAKE BORDER. On page 88, of our sample book you will find the rules governing our sales; YOU CAN BUY ANY SIDE WALL of 7 1-2c. PER ROLL or ABOVE WITH or WITHOUT THE BORDER. There are THOUSANDS OF THESE BOOKS sent thru the mail. There are 2000 OF THEM IN THE HANDS OF XENIA PATRONS. TRUTHFUL ADVERTISING ALWAYS PAYS.
6. SHADING OF PAPERS—The SLOGAN upon which our tremendous business has been built, is SATISFACTION OR MONEY BACK, and we will cheerfully replace any paper sold by us which DOES NOT COME UP TO EXPECTATIONS, regardless of WHAT THE COMPLAINT MAY BE. ASK OUR PATRONS.

1c PAPER AND THE BORDER—ROOM SIZE—Our room prices are figured on the basis of a room 12x14, which requires 12 rolls of side wall and 20 yards of border. On Page 88 of our book in the rules governing our sales, it is plainly stated that we require our customers on our 1c, 3 3-4c and 5c papers to take the border in the proportion of 20 yds. to each 12 rolls of side wall. In other words, if your room requires only 10 rolls of side wall, you are required to buy only 15 yards of border. Now compare our price and use your head; 10 rolls of side wall at 1c per roll, 10c, 15 yards of border at 3c per yard equals 45c, making the total room price 55c, as against the admitted price of our competitor of 75c. On this basis we will sell anybody as many carloads as they have the money to buy. REMEMBER—On any paper of 7 1-2c or above you can purchase the side wall with or without the border.

OUR FREE SAMPLE BOOK—This special display of Wall Papers carry no special reduced prices. They are our regular papers. Among them will be found each and every pattern shown in our marvelous 1927 sample book. As stated before this book is sent thru the mail into every state in the Union and there is not a single word of untruthful advertising in it. In 30 years we have established a reputation of which we are proud. Our patrons in this community are many and this special display of Wall Papers will remain in Xenia for

It would have all the ecstasy of embracing a snow man.

But kissing a bald head is as fruitless of enjoyment as picking burrs off a woolen sock.

VETERAN PRINTER GETS WATCH

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright, 1927
KENOSHA, Wis., May 4.—Fifty years in front of type cases is the record set by Dwight House, now 66 years old, who began to be a printer as an apprentice when he was 16 and recently celebrated his typographical jubilee.

A typical old school printer, House has a certain lofty contempt for machine typography, although he admits that inventions unknown when he was a young man have added considerable speed to typesetting processes.

"Faster, yes," says House, still in his prime and with slight undimmed, still active in front of a type case, "but for a really artistic, satisfactory and 100 per cent accurate printing job, where can you beat the old handset method? Nimble fingers and the human brain form a typographical combination that no machinery can hope to equal."

The Kenosha branch of the International Typographical Union of which House is a member of long standing, took proper cognizance of his recent jubilee. He was entertained by the union membership, and after speeches had been made complimenting him, a gold watch, suitably engraved was presented to "Kenosha's oldest printer."

"NO MACHINE CAN EVER SET TYPE THE WAY HUMAN FINGERS CAN SET IT," SAYS DWIGHT HOUSE, FOR FIFTY YEARS A PRINTER

Pimples, Boils, Skin Eruptions

Skilled physicians recognize the appearance of pimples, boils and other skin eruptions as being an indication of an abnormal condition of the system. This is why so many thousands have been enabled to free themselves of these unsightly blemishes and painful annoyances by taking a course of S.S.S. You owe it to yourself to try S.S.S. It helps Nature build up red corpuscles. It improves the processes by which the blood is nourished. It is time-tried and reliable.

"I suffered from impure blood—was weak, and I had lost so much weight, I didn't look natural. I had pimples and was also bothered with a breaking-out that itched terribly. I also had boils one after another.

I tried different kinds of remedies, but nothing did me any good until a friend advised me to take S.S.S. which I did. This was some time ago. Now I feel well, and I am getting along fine. S.S.S. stopped the itching and it cured me of boils. I advise all weak and run-down people to give S.S.S. a trial. It clears up the skin and makes you strong and fills you with energy." Mrs. J. W. Barker, 1337 Walnut Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

S.S.S. is made from the fresh roots of medicinal herbs and plants and is prepared in a scientific way in a modern laboratory.

S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

HER MAN FOREVER MATED

BEATRICE BURTON
author of
"Love Bound"

READ THIS FIRST:
SYLVIA STARR has been engaged to Randall Phillips for a year when she also her to love him, because he's fallen in love with her cousin, FAY SHIRLEY.

Heartbroken, Sylvia gives him up, much to the satisfaction of her AUNT AGONY, the shrewd old maid who coaxed her. Aunt Agony says Ranny will never be true to any woman for very long. Her opinion of him seems to be correct, too. For suddenly he drops Fay and Sylvia marries him, after all.

Their married life is not happy to start with. For Ranny hates her aunt, and gradually he returns to his old habits—having love affairs and gambling with his old cronies. He spends so much money on himself that Sylvia has to give music lessons to keep things going.

When the baby is born, Sylvia has to turn the dark little breakfast room of their tiny flat into a bedroom for him. And when he finally dies, Sylvia has a nervous breakdown—refusing ever to go into the flat again, and refusing to see Ranny. But he finally convinces her that he loves her, even though he was having a love affair with a girl in his office at the time of the baby's death, and couldn't be found for hours. And she comes back to him and they make a fresh start.

With $5000 that Sylvia made writing a novel, she begins payments on the Little White House where the second baby, a girl, is born. Ranny settled down to business in his father's firm of JAMISON PHELPS & SON, and everything goes well until PARS DELAND comes to town.

Babs, a librarian, is a guest at Sylvia's house while she hunts a flat. Failing to attract PETER WILK, a bachelor who once asked Sylvia to marry him, Babs turns her attention upon Ranny. One night she tells Ranny that Peter is in love with Sylvia, and Ranny puts him out of the house. The next day Peter's old sister, MISS SARAH WILK, who has known Sylvia from childhood, sends for her and tells her that Peter cares for her, and asks her not to have him at her house any more.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER LI.

ALL the way home in her taxi cab Sylvia thought over what Sarah had just told her.

Of course, she herself had always known that Peter was half in love with her. She had grown used to the fact—just as she had grown used to the fact that grass is green and sunshine warm. It meant very little to her, one way or the other.

She had known it long before Ranny had pointed it out to her by his insane jealousy of Peter.

She had known it long before Babs had giggled about it in her catty way. She had known about it long before this morning, when Sarah had told her that sometimes Peter walked the floor for hours after he came home from his visits to the Little White House.

It was hard to believe. Somehow, Sylvia couldn't imagine Peter, the staid and the matter-of-fact Peter, losing sleep over her or any other woman.

But she knew that it was true, or Sarah never would have sent for her to tell her about. Sarah wasn't the kind of person who imagined things. "But why in the world couldn't Peter have fallen in love with Babs, and married her?" she asked herself, as she paid the taxi driver and turned toward the Little White House. "She would have made a humdinger of a wife for him. Both of them, the windows filled with tiny evergreens, to the door with its brass knocker and the fanlight above it.

She loved the little house almost as if it were alive. Its friendly walls, with the sun shining on them, held all her earthly happiness. Ranny and the baby, and her love for them.

"Oh, but I wish Babs would find a flat and go," Sylvia thought for the hundredth time, as she fitted her key into the lock, and opened the door.

She liked Babs of course, in a way. But she had been here for nearly two weeks, now, and was fast wearing out her welcome.

For one thing, she never helped with the work. And Sylvia and the little maid got up three elaborate meals a day for her. That took time, not to mention money.

She was sloppy, too. She scattered powder all over Sylvia's room, and she had taken all the finish from the top of the dressing table by spilling a bottle of perfume all over it. She left her nightgown and kimono on the floor every morning, for Sylvia to pick up and put away.

Her brush, full of fluff and hair, decorated the bathroom shelf from ceiling to night; and she always had a bowl of clay face-pack on the kitchen window sill.

"It's a wonder to me that Ranny doesn't mind having her around," Sylvia thought, as she stepped noiselessly into the vestibule of the house, and began to take off her overshoes.

Then, suddenly, she heard Ranny and Babs talking together in the living room at the left of the hall.

"Yes, you're right. I wasn't made for a business man," Ranny was saying. "But what's a man to do when he's married, and has a wife and family? He keeps his nose down pretty tight to the grindstone, let me tell you."

For one dismal moment, Sylvia thought over the two years when Ranny had never given her any money at all—when she had known what it was to have her own nose close to the grindstone.

Then she tiptoed to the door of the room, and deliberately listened to Babs reply.

It came in that throaty, silky voice of Babs. "I know, but it seems to me that a man like you ever married," she said, "with all your ideas and a little time, you would have made yourself the biggest architect in the country. I'm sure of it."

Sylvia could have laughed. Ranny an architect? Why, Ranny couldn't draw one straight line after another. And what he didn't know about houses would fill a book—a whole library of books.

It was all Father Phelps could do to make Ranny get down to business long enough to sell houses, let alone plan them. Ranny's business was a by-product in the Phelps family.

"If Sylvia were—Well, if Sylvia were a different kind of wife than she is, she'd make you do the thing you want to do," Babs' smooth voice went on. "She wouldn't insist upon saving this house and an automobile. If I were married to a man like you, Ranny—"

Her voice died away on a melancholy note, and Sylvia found herself grinding her teeth together in silent rage. To think that Babs would slam her like this here in her own house.

But she was smiling, when she stepped into the room five minutes later, and greeted Babs and Ranny.

"Well, I'm back," she said gaily. "For goodness' sake Ranny, what are you doing home at this hour of the morning? You had an appointment with Tom Boyle this morning at ten thirty, you know."

He looked at her frowning for a minute, and then dragged his long body up from the chair.

"Afraid I might miss a dollar if I didn't go to the office on time for once?" he asked, and Ranny gave a little gasp. It was more than a year since Ranny had used that kind of tone to her.

When he had gone, Babs asked for a cup of coffee. Sylvia brought her some on a little tray, and found her a cigarette.

"Here's the paper, too. I thought you might want to look through the ads for a flat," she said blantly. "I know you're not very comfortable here."

Babs flushed, but she took the paper and began to hunt through it. "For Rent" columns.

"I think I'll have Ranny take me to look at a couple of these places this afternoon," she said easily, when she had finished with the paper, and was drinking her coffee.

She got up and went out into the hall to telephone Ranny.

Then she came trailing back into the room where Sylvia was brushing up the ashes that she and Ranny had dropped on the carpet, during their heart-to-heart talk.

"I'll go up and get back to work," she said languidly. "I don't see how a girl of your intelligence can stand just four walls all day. I used to want to get married—but now I'm thankful that I didn't. Why be a wife? Wives get the little end of everything." She looked saucily out of the window.

"What do you mean?" Sylvia asked. Babs laughed. "Oh, they learn to think about nothing but bread puddings and babies," she said. "They don't have their husband's confidence. They don't share his dreams, even though they share his house with him."

Sylvia gave her a keen glance with those blue eyes of hers.

"Don't be silly, Babs," she said sharply. "All you see is the outside of marriage. Wait until you're a wife, and you'll know more about it."

Babs smiled mysteriously under her lipstick.

"Sylvia, take your own case," Babs drawled. "You don't even know that Ranny is an artist. You don't even suspect that he longs to plan wonderful buildings—poems in steel and stone. You don't know that he hates the sordid part of business, the money-grabbing part of it."

Sylvia felt like telling her that Ranny didn't mind the spending part of it, though. She might also have told her that Ranny hated any kind of work, having the sunny, lazy disposition of a happy-go-lucky hobo. Why, Ranny wouldn't have planned a building, if his wife hadn't depended on it.

Look here, Babs," she almost snapped at her. "Don't you start putting wild ideas into Ranny's head. He's just beginning to settle down to his job. He's just beginning to make something of himself—He'd never study architecture, or anything else, if he never made anything but detective stories and the sport page of the paper. He's about as artistic as Jack Dempsey."

Babs gave her a pitying look. "You don't understand Ranny," she drawled. "You don't know him like I do. Sylvia gazed after her as she went up stairs, dragging her coffee-stained morning dress after her.

"Well," she breathed, "I certainly will be jiggered!"

But that was only the beginning of the thing.

Ranny took Babs driving that afternoon, and they found a little furnished flat on Hester street, two blocks from the library.

"May I stay here with you people a few days longer, until I buy some cushions and things to brighten it up?" she asked Sylvia that night, when she and Ranny returned an hour late for their supper.

"Of course you may, Babs," Sylvia answered cheerfully. She was so glad that Babs was really leaving her around for a day or two more.

She carried out their dishes and washed them, and when she returned to the living room, they were side by side on the davenport, pouring over a book on British architecture.

She didn't see that every now and then as they turned the pages of the thick book, their hands met and held.

On Friday morning Babs left, bag and baggage, to establish herself in her new home.

Ranny drove her away, and Sylvia couldn't help noticing how Babs cuddled up against him in the seat of the car.

"I hope you don't think I'm mean, but I'm so glad that Babs is gone that I could just jump over the roof," she said to him that night, when they were settled beside the fire.

Ranny said nothing, but went on reading his J. S. Fletcher murder mystery. Sylvia smiled to herself, as she looked at the book on architecture lying, untouched, under his chair.

"Where in the world did Babs get the idea that you want to study architecture?" she asked him, taking out one of his socks from her mending basket.

Ranny closed his book. "As a matter of fact, she put the idea into my head," he answered. "I've always known that I've hated my job—any kind of steady job. And if I weren't saddled with a family, I'd go abroad now, and study architecture."

Sylvia blinked at him, as she some times did when she was startled. She was thinking hard.

"Well, Ranny," she said, when she found her voice at last, "You know I'll do everything I can to help you, if you do want to study architecture. But isn't it funny that you never were even interested in it, before?"

He didn't answer.

"I'm sure I can take care of myself and the baby for a year or two," she added, very quietly. "I know I could get back most of my pupils and give music lessons again. Would I have to give up the house?"

The thought of giving up the Little White House made her heart sink.

She loved every board and nail in it. It was home as no other place ever could be home.

Before Ranny could answer, the telephone in the hall gave his whirling ring. He leaped to his feet as if he had been waiting for the sound of the door behind him.

Sylvia sat, looking at that closed door. She had never known Ranny to close it before when he telephoned—why had he closed it now? What was it that he didn't want her to hear?

She did a dreadful thing. She tiptoed to the door, silently turned the knob, and opened it a little, and put her ear to the crack.

She could hear him perfectly now.

the pigment test tells you the house paint to use . .

SEEING is believing! We were undecided ourselves about what made good house paint until we saw the pigment test. Look at the black panel below. Note that of the six pigments used in house paint only white lead and white zinc—the pigments used in Devco Lead and Zinc Paint—form opaque white films that completely cover and hide the surface. The others all form translucent films. That's why Devco covers better, spreads farther, gives greater protection.

Make sure today that you are using the right oil in your Ford.

Smoothness and economy depend upon the oil you use

Only a specially-compounded light-bodied oil—Polarine F—can give best results in your Ford. There are several reasons why this is so.

The Ford motor is a high speed motor and requires an oil which flows freely and quickly to all engine parts.

It is a high compression motor in which carbon formation is more serious, hence an oil of low carbon tendency is required.

Its bearing construction requires an oil light enough to penetrate quickly to bearing surfaces, yet of sufficient body to withstand heat and pressure.

The splash system of lubrication is used, requiring a light-bodied oil which will atomize readily when splashed by the connecting rods.

Polarine F also has the second vital Ford oil characteristic. It keeps transmission bands soft and pliable—prevents chatter and grab.

Our recommendation of Polarine F for Fords is based on our own experience with these cars as well as the judgment of lubrication engineers.

Change crank-case oil every 500 miles and refill with Polarine F. For chassis lubrication use Polarine BB (for differential gears) and Polarine Cup Grease. These high-quality lubricants are available everywhere in Ohio to help you get best results from your Ford.
